INTRODUCTION

1933

We wish to take this opportunity to thank our many friends and customers who have helped in the success we have achieved and we will strive to give both new and old customers the same excellent quality and service, as in the past, during the coming year.

Our light, sandy soil is well adapted for growing the very highest quality of Gladiolus bulbs and reports received from everywhere—England, Australia, Germany, Holland, Canada, Cuba, and California—give ample testimony that our vigorous New England grown stock can be grown successfully in all climates.

In this catalog you will find the finest of exhibition and garden varieties listed at very reasonable prices, every variety being tested and grown by us and found worthy.

THRIP—Hundreds of people visited our fields this past season and remarked on the beautiful sight displayed. We also would like to add that many of them mentioned that they saw no signs of thrip while going through the gardens.

Visitors are cordially invited from July 15th until frost to enjoy our massive gardens of Gladiolus and it will well repay you for the trip to come and see what a gorgeous sight these blooms present.

We are located on the U. S. ROUTE 1 on the main highway to Portsmouth, seven miles from Newburyport, Mass.

Sincerely,

SEABROOK NURSERIES,

Seabrook, N. H.

CARE AND CULTURE OF GLADIOLUS

BULBS should not be planted until corn planting time, as nothing is gained by planting before the ground is warm.

Select a sunny location away from roots of trees and shrubs. In localities where summer is extremely warm, a partially shaded situation is preferable. If your soil is heavy, plant four inches deep, and if light, six inches, having bulbs five or six inches apart.

Place bulbs in a well worked trench in staggered or zigzag rows—· . . . and cover at first with about two inches of loam; when shoots begin to appear, work balance of loam into the trench. At all times keep the soil loose. As an aid to producing larger blooms work in fertilizer around the plants when about a foot or more in height and never at planting time. At the time flower spikes appear abundant watering is very beneficial.

Bulbs should be dug as soon as you note the leaves turning yellow. Cut stem off half an inch above bulb, spread them out to dry for two or three days in a sunny location and then place in an open shed or room for two weeks or more before storing them away in a cool, dry cellar. Keep them spread out and not over three inches deep. It is a benefit to give bulbs an occasional sunning or airing during the winter.

When cutting the flowers be sure to leave at least four leaves remaining on the plant. Positive injury to the blooming qualities of the bulb for the following year will occur if this precaution is not heeded.

If you want the blooms for cut flowers, cut the spike when first bud fully opens. The remaining buds will open nicely and give you a longer period of bloom and greater enjoyment.

Remove wilted blossoms, change water and cut off small portion of the stems each day.

CONTROL OF THRIP

As the control of Thrip seems to be a nationwide topic, we are issuing the following statement, knowing that if the proper care is used, the gladiolus can be grown in the future just as successfully as in the past. This pride of summer flowers will demand more care and attention until the insect is well under control, if not eliminated. Growers who were troubled with it two years ago, by proper treatment last spring, had very little Thrip in their gardens this past summer.

The Thrip found on the gladiolus during the past two years appear to be black with cream colored wing bases, having a banded appearance and are about 1-16 inch in length. This plant provides a wonderful hiding place for Thrip as they live inside the folded leaves and florets unnoticed by some until the flower droops, others may observe a silvery sheen on the leaves where the insect has sucked the juice out of the leaf, during the very early stages of the plant.

The control of the insect must be done mostly through the treatment of the bulbs, during the storage period, for they will live over on the bulbs, if kept in a warm temperature.

At digging time, the tops should be removed, being very careful not to shake the tops over any of the stock, and burned.

Bulbs should be stored in a room where the temperature is no higher than 45 or lower than 32 degrees. Two months before planting time, sprinkle Naphthalene flakes at the rate of 1 pound to 1000 bulbs or 1 ounce to about 100 corms among the bulbs and allow fumigation to continue until the corms are planted.

As another precaution, soak the bulbs in lye at the rate of one can of lye to 25 gallons of water for 12 hours just before planting. This will kill any insect on them and will aid in preventing scab or rot. This solution must not be used any stronger.

There is little that can be done to control the attack of this insect in the garden. A garden which has had gladiolus for years, with never a sign of Thrip, may be infested by a person bringing it on his clothing. High winds will carry them from a neighbor's patch to yours. Infested bouquets of flowers may be taken from one state to another. Careful inspection of plants should be made once a week, by folding back the leaves to determine whether any thrip are present. The flower spikes should be inspected also as they form. Start inspecting the minute they come out of the ground.

If thrip should appear, use a weekly spray of one rounded tablespoon of Paris green, two pounds of brown sugar and three gallons of water well mixed. If a stronger solution is desired, which is harmless, use 2 tablespoons of Paris green instead of one, to the same mixture. Some have substituted cheap molasses in place of brown sugar, which is good. The solution must get into the folded leaves to do the most good. Should thrip appear in the young flower spikes, cut them down to four to five inches above the ground and burn them. Then spray with the Paris green mixture the remaining stalk.

Sometimes where the gladiolus plant has been well watered, keeping the soil fairly moist, the plant will grow rapidly enough so that it has time to bloom before the thrip could injure it.

Pass this information along to your neighbors and friends who are lovers of gladiolus that they, too, may help destroy this pest.

SEABROOK NURSERIES GLADIOLUS

Our successful harvest last Fall presented fine, plump, healthy stock, free from disease and injurious insects, which enables us to supply our customers with A-1 quality Gladiolus bulbs at very low prices.

Of the many complimentary letters we receive through the year, here is one from a customer which arrived December 23rd, 1932.

“Received the bulbs last week and although they came the coldest day we had, which was below zero, they were not frozen, due to the splendid way they were packed.

I want to thank you for the large bulbs sent with my order of bulblets, also the very fine Gratis included. I am especially pleased with these as they are different from any variety I have.

I am very much pleased with all the bulbs, they are so clean and healthy looking, I know I shall have lovely blooms from them.

Thanking you again for the many bulbs you gave me, I am

Respectfully,

E. H., Ohio.”
